

BURLINGTON TOWN MEETING CALLED; MAY SELL ISLAND

Public Session to Take Place On Night of August Fifteenth

BELIEVED GOOD MOVE

Sum Expected is $100,000; Amount Would Be of Great Use

BURLINGTON, Aug. 7.—A town meeting has been called on the evening of August 15th, to be held in the town hall, here, for the purpose of considering the proposal of the Board of Island Managers to sell the upper half of Burlington Island.

Mayor Harold V. Holmes issued the announcement relative to the session, and this is the first of its kind to be held since the separation of the borough from the township almost 40 years ago.

It is stated the island managers are to ask for permission to sell the upper section of the island, believing it will be a good business move. The land will not be sold for less than $100,000, and the interest on the sum it is believed might be applied to many good causes. The rental now received from the land is $400.

Should the island be sold it will become taxable property, and this, in addition to the interest on the sale money will add much to the borough's coffers.

From the sale of the lower section $20,000 was derived, this being in the days before the Civil War. Schoolhouses were built and equipped with the sum, meaning the acquiring of same at no additional cost to the taxpayers.

It is said that should the sale take place the island fund principal will not be touched, as it will be used as collateral in floating loans, and the interest on the loans and retirement of the loans will be taken care of by the earnings of the fund.

Thus it is said the fund will remain, but under the new system of things it will work more advantageously for the people of Burlington than the island is working.

Under an act of the New Jersey Legislature the Island Board has the power to sell the upper half of the island, but not until the consent of the people of Burlington has been given in town meeting. The members of the board are asking for this permission, not because it will make their work easier, but because it will make the burden of the taxpayers lighter in the matter of building schoolhouses.

The island was given to the city of Burlington by the Legislature far back in the early days for the education of the youth of the city of Burlington. Its benefit was meagre indeed until a fund of $20,000 was secured through the sale of the lower half, and then school buildings began to rise and school debts were paid without further taxing the people.

If consent is given the Island Board to sell the property the Board will advertise the sale in New York, Philadelphia and local newspapers. This is required by law.

Four different agencies are bidding for the island. The agencies have not divulged the name of their principals. Nor has it been divulged as to what disposition will be made of the island.

But it is known that it will not be sold for less than $100,000 which would mean a handsome income for the Burlington schools in all the days to come.

SCOUTS AT BUCCOU

J. The trip was made in cars furnished by the troop committee under the direction of Livingston Joyce.

Dining as You Fly Has Its Own Charm

The passengers on the Graf Zeppelin were unanimous in praising the cuisine of the great airship and commending it to those travelers who will take passage for the world tour. Mrs.

Janette Crouse, of Syracuse, left, is waiting for the waiter, but then she had plenty of time. Chef Mainz, center, in his little galley certainly turns out the most appetizing of meals and always is ready to oblige with the pet dishes for individual tastes. Besides all this there's no dry law on the Zep as witness the wine bottles before Mme. Rene Gourevitch and her fellow diner at the right.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 7.—At midnight tonight, unless an unforeseen change in the weather occurs, the majestic Zeppelin will thrust her nose toward the sky and start for Friedrichshafen, Germany, on the first leg of her round-the-world cruise.

Ideal weather is not expected for the start but the Graf has proven time and again that she can overcome the vicissitudes of the elements.

Variable winds and possible showers were expected tonight but it is not likely that the winds will be sufficiently strong to prevent the Zeppelin being taken from her hangar on scheduled time.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the mighty airship has given orders that all freight and mail for the air liner must be on the field at the naval air station here by four o'clock this afternoon.

All the passengers who are to make the flight also have been asked to be within calling distance of the field at that time. They will board the airship before ten o'clock tonight.

Commander Zeno W. Wicks, who has charge of refueling the ship, stated this morning that all her gas tanks would be filled by noon.

Filling of the envelopes containing the lifting gas, hydrogen, will also be completed by that time. The fabric engines and other equipment of the ship have already been thoroughly inspected and found in perfect condition.

Eighteen passengers, including one woman, are expected to be aboard when the Zeppelin starts in addition to her actual crew of 41. Two pieces of "live freight"—a Boston bulldog and a baby alligator—will also make the trip.

The passengers are: The sole woman Lady Drummond Hay, of London, a veteran transatlantic air traveler. William B. Leeds, son of the late multi-millionaire tin plate king and husband of Princess Xenia of Russia.

Commander Charles E. Rosendahl and Lieut. Jack C. Richardson, observers for the United States Navy.

Two New Yorkers, William Weber and Nathan Wexler, are making the voyage as far as Friedrichshafen as the result of a golfing bet.

Joachim B. Richard, of Brochton, Mass.

John E. Larney, of Brooklyn, going "just for the ride."
Other passengers expected to be aboard when the Zeppelin leaves according to officials of the Hamburg-American line are:

HOMESICK!

"Tell Daddy to come after me." These words of a homesick youngster appeared on a picture postal sent from Ocean City, N. J., which was intended for the parents of the small boy or girl who wants to come home.

The tot in scrawling out his little message evidently forgot to write the name of his people on the card for it is addressed merely "Bath Road, Bristol, Pa." Inquiries were made by the rural mail carrier in an effort to locate the child's people, but his efforts proved unsuccessful.

SCHOOL BOARD THANKS DOCTORS FOR SERVICES

Expresses Appreciation For Charity Operations Performed Here Thursday

OTHER ROUTINE WORK

Last Thursday the doctors of Bristol held a free clinic at the Harriman hospital for the removal of tonsils and adenoids from the public school children, whose condition was revealed through the medical examination, which by the order of the State, is made yearly in all the school districts in Pennsylvania. The Bristol School Board at its meeting held last evening, adopted the following minute as an expression of its appreciation of the kindness and generosity of the physicians.

"For several years past, Dr. George T. Fox, owner of the Harriman Hospital, and the other physicians of Bristol, have been co-operating with the school board, in its follow-up work incident to the medical inspection of pupils in the Bristol Public Schools, by establishing a free clinic for the removal of tonsils and adenoids, for children whose parents are unable to pay the expenses of such an operation.

"The School Board feels, that this kindly assistance, as well as the splendid spirit of co-operation and above all the charitable motive, which has been exemplified in the action of the Doctors, is worthy of the highest praise and commendation of all good citizens, and it desires to accept this opportunity, to publicly thank the Doctors of Bristol, and in this way cause them to know that their kindness in the cause of humanity, has been appreciated.

"Some one has said: 'The ingratitude of the world can never deprive us of the conscious happiness of having acted with humanity ourselves. Although words may seem feeble and inadequate to express proper appreciation, and while the world may appear cold and ungrateful, it cannot deprive us of the conscious happiness which comes from the performance of a generous and humane act. While the members of the school board regret, that simple words cannot express the deeper feelings of gratitude which dwell within their hearts, yet they feel and know, that the happiness which the Doctors will enjoy through the consciousness of having performed a kindly and humane act, will offer more compensation, more happiness and more satisfaction, than words no matter how appropriate and forceful, can ever attempt to express.

"To Dr. George T. Fox, the owner of the Harriman Hospital, who so kindly donated the use of his hospital for the operations, we not only express our own thanks, but the appreciation of the community as well. To Dr. Frank Lehman, Dr. H. Doyle Webb, Dr. J. Fred Wagner, Dr. Thorne S. Harris, Dr. John G. Steele and Dr. William C. LeCompte, who co-operated in the performance of the operations, (Continued on Page Four)

BOY SCOUTS FILL CAMP BUCCOU TO ENTIRE CAPACITY

Registrations for Next Week, Final Days, Already Taken

HAVE A STOCKADE

Lads Prepare to Live for Short Time After Fashion of Daniel Boone

Camp Buccou is more than filled to capacity this week, and registrations for next week, the sixth and last week of camp, are full.

Forty-nine Scouts, nineteen Cubs, five Indians and four Stockade Dwellers comprise the boy section while the staff of fifteen regular members and five additional volunteers keep the program full of activities—contests, eats, campfires, canoeing, boating and night games—one round of fun and action.

The three Buccou Troops this week are being led by Deputy Commissioner Kenneth Lane of Chalfont, Scoutmaster of Buccou Troop No. 1; Scoutmaster Robert Brenner of Cornwells, Scoutmaster of Buccou Troop No. 2; and Scoutmaster Isaac Vanartsdalen of Doylestown No. 2 as Scoutmaster of Buccou Troop No. 3.

The Daniel Boone Stockade started this week and will run for a two week period. The Stockade contains activities of a nature relating to the life on the outskirts of civilization as during the "49s". Each stockade inhabitant will receive material to make a buckskin shirt and trousers, a sheath knife, moccasins, tinder pouch and powder horn.

The Scouts in the Indian village are completing the making of their moccasins for everyday wear, and will start making their dress moccasins for ceremonials. The Indians have each received material to make the above moccasins, felt for "g" strings, single feather headdress, hair for making their wig, bows, arrows, and Indian headwork, loom and beads.

With Scouts and Cubs naturally seeking advancement after having had two previous years of compulsory advancement, the plan this year of optional advancement has met with loyal response on the part of every boy. Scouting endeavors to benefit the boy physically, mentally and morally and Scouts at Buccou are progressing in all three branches of Scout activity.

This week promises to be one of the busiest. On Monday evening the Newtown Exchange Club was at camp. Tuesday, the Bucks County Council executive board and camp committee in a combined meeting spent the day at camp. Today, the Doylestown Rotary Club members will be guests of the camp.

Rev. Charles F. Freeman, of Doylestown, spent the week at Buccou, and was the speaker at the Friday evening ceremonial campfire. Mr. Freeman's address on "Courage" was an inspiration to every camper. Scouts and troop committees of Bristol No. 5, Harriman Methodist Church troop, and Bristol No. 6, the Bristol Methodist church troop, and deputy commissioner Joseph I. Burtonwood attended the ceremonial campfire. Every Scouter in the county, whether man or boy is cordially invited to attend the Friday evening ceremonial campfire. The campfire during the next two weeks will be the "Pageant of Fire", a very realistic presentation.

With the arrival in camp of "Bill" Lentz director of this year's annual show, plans for the 1929 vaudeville show at Buccou on Thursday, August 15th, are making progress. The entire country-side population around Buccou, many of whom befriended our Scouts on their Wednesday night hikes, attended the show last year, and met over two hundred people from Bucks county. The countryside as well as many friends of scouting in the country are making plans to visit camp on the 15th.

Last week was a banner week in American Red Cross accomplishment. James Wylie, the scout director of last year, is conducting the swimming department in conjunction with his duties as associate camp director. Last week seven boys attained the rank of "swimmer", 13 boys attained the rank of junior American Red Cross Life Savers, and three campers achieved the rank of American Senior Red Cross Life Saver.

James Townsend of Langhorne, No. 1, program orderly at camp this year, delivered the address at Sunday Chapel. Robert Sidee, of Langhorne, No. 1, offered the prayer, and Carl Leidy, of Doylestown No. 2, read the Scripture.

Scouts elected to Wilmachtendick last Thursday evening and initiated on Friday evening were Edward Dunn, of Doylestown No. 1, Gerald Finney of Churchville No. 1, Charles Scott of Cornwells Heights No. 1, and Ernest Mintel and Ronald Wilson of Chalfont No. 1. Wilmachtendick is the National Boy Scout Honor Fraternity whose members are only eligible through their cheerful service, assistance to others, and disregard of self in encouraging others with constant living of the Boy Scout oath and law. Commissioners elected to govern the (Continued on Page Three)

REFUTING THE LONG-FACE

The pessimists, who were numerous and vociferous only a twelve-month or so ago, assuring society that the world was headed for the demimion bow-wows because of the moral degeneration of the young people of both sexes, have been "piping down" of late. They have had their day—but their charges were unconvincing—and now the other side is being heard.

Two educators of boys publicly and indignantly repudiate the pessimists and go farther to describe the modern boy as five times as decent, as truthful and as manly as the boys of their own youth.

A clinching corroboration of these approbations of modern youth is the declaration by another champion of the present-day boy—he happens to be a bishop—that it is perfectly absurd to think that the world could be overturned by a people born during the last two decades.

The churchman who said "we cannot make the younger generation the nation's scapegoat" hit the nail on the head. Whatever youth is today it is exactly what preceding generations made it.

Neither are the young women of today without their champions from the effete generations. Workers among them find them no worse in any respect and much better in some respects than their mothers and grandmothers.

Most of these unfavorable and unfair criticisms of the younger generation are from those human antiquities who have forgotten their own youth and would measure youth by the standards of old age.

TEACHERS

Probably the only law that is strictly obeyed without being enforced is the first law of nature—self preservation.

The instinct of self-defense explains why more people are not maimed and killed in traffic accidents, why the surf does not swallow up more bathers, why so many would-be suicides change their minds just in time or just too late. Man doesn't need to be taught to defend his life and his property, to eat and sleep, and to earn a living.

But he must be taught to get an education.

Left to his own devices, the average person will get a very primitive education. Too often the self-taught are but half-taught.

This is the reason school teaching is the most important profession in the world. Educate human beings and they will require the services of the doctor and lawyer less. Educate them and the world will need to be saved for democracy less frequently. Educate one generation and the next will take care of itself.

But it is only of late that society has begun to appreciate the importance of the educator, and it does not yet give him an adequate return for his services. The only reason teachers' salaries are larger now than in pre-war days is that business, with its high salaries, threatened to take away from the schools and colleges their most able educators.

When parents begin to think as seriously about the individuals responsible for the mental training of their children as they do about their servants the profession of teaching will come into its own.

An inhibition is something you want to do but won't. The exact opposite, for example, of spinach.

Willie Durant, financial backer of a stranded musical comedy, is friendly with Rita French, the star, but refuses to put up any more money. He is unsuccessfully attentive to Kitty, the stage-struck check room girl, and has inveigled her father, Dad Malone, and her sweet heart, Jimmy, to invest their life savings to gain a hold on the girl. Jerry Connolly, the manager, quarrels with Durant over the matter and takes a gun from him. The box-office is robbed. Joe, the detective, suspects Jimmy. Kitty is followed to the prop room by Durant, who tries to make love to her. Jimmy discovers them and nits Durant.

"How should I start being myself," Kitty asked, sparring for time to think.

"Well, in the first place, you could come over here and sit down and be a little more sociable." He patted the empty space on the couch beside him. "An' then suppose we have a little drink. Jus' a little snifter." He pulled a tall silver flask from his pocket, shook it, and then reached across to a cupboard beside him where various and oddly assorted glasses filled the shelves. He arranged two tumblers and poured the drinks.

"If I do," Kitty began, "will you—will you forget about the robbery and save the show?"

Durant grinned. "That's a big order for a little girl, but I might."

She Tried to Fight Him Off

He rose to his feet, picking up one glass, and handed it to Kitty. "Isn't it worth taking a chance?"

The girl hesitated. "Yes," she said slowly, "I guess it is." She took the tumbler from his outstretched hand and with a wry face downed the liquor. The strong alcohol burned her throat. She sputtered and coughed, the tears coming into her eyes.

Durant patted her back, laughing at her discomfort. "You're even cute when you choke," he caught her hand, pressing it to his lips. "I'm mad about you, Kitty. I'd do anything—anything in the world for you."

"Give me a drink of water, then," Kitty managed to gasp, between coughs.

Still laughing, Durant took her empty glass and went over to the grimy sink, turning on the water. He filled the tumbler and brought it back, holding it to the girl's lips.

"Oo-ooh! How anyone can drink that stuff for pleasure!" Kitty swallowed some of the water and looked up at Durant, wiping the tears from her eyes.

"You'll learn," the backer assured her, taking up his own glass and downing the Scotch in one hasty gulp. "No kidding, honey, I'm crazy 'bout you—jus' crazy 'bout you. I love you." He seized her hands and held them tight.

"Really?" Kitty questioned. She tried to make her tone light and bantering to conceal the fear that was stealing over her. But she made no effort to withdraw her hands. "What kind of love?"

"Practical love! The kind that comes wrapped up with jewelry. That's what I'm offering you—you sweet, silly little kid. The sort of love that doesn't fade with the moon. Don't you understand, Kitty? I could do a lot of nice things for you if you'd only let me. Don't you understand, Kitty? You're green. Get some experience and get it from me."

"Maybe I am green," Kitty spoke slowly, as though pondering over the man's words.

"Awful green," Durant shook his head, sorrowfully. "Furts my eyes, you're so green. Have 't wear smoked glasses when I look at you, but what it takes 't remove green Willie's got!"

He ran his hand experimentally along her arm, and still Kitty voiced no protest. Durant felt that he was making headway, and about time, too. Everything was in his favor.

He was alone with the girl in a room far removed from the activity of the stage, and he was playing a familiar game—a game in which he held the trump cards. And best of all, Rita would be occupied with her scene for some little time. Slowly his arm encircled her neck.

Kitty tried to edge away without seeming to repulse her admirer. She still hedged for time, hoping against hope that fate would intervene to solve all the difficulties. She could feel Durant's breath warm on her cheek as his face came closer to hers.

"Oh, gee, oh gosh, you're the sweetest! I'll thing I've ever met." Durant drew her to him, but before he could kiss her, Kitty had suddenly extricated herself and was standing on the other side of the table. Durant blinked.

"Remember I haven't promised anything yet," Kitty smiled seductively, her head perked on one side. "But if I do, will you give Jerry a check for Sam and the cast?"

"Um-m-m, maybe," Durant hesitated. "But don't rush me. I don't like 't be rushed. Come on, give us a kiss to close the deal—jus' a little kiss to close the deal!"

"No—not right now," Kitty clung to her side of the table, trying not to appear frightened.

But the sight of her so near, and the sweet, warm remembrance of her in his arms mad, trying to forget everything but that he wanted her and was determined to have her. With a swift movement of his hands he flung aside the table and seized her, holding her close and kissing the full red lips, the white throat, the fragrant hair.

Furiously Kitty fought him off, pushing his head away, trying to escape his strong arms that held her crushed to him. Tears of anger and chagrin filled her eyes, blinding her. Then with one full sweep of her strong, young arm she slapped him squarely across the mouth. He fell back, clapping his hand to his face where Kitty had struck him.

"Say, what's the big idea?" he demanded, a storm of rage and passion shaking him into a kind of sobriety. "What do you think you're pulling, after telling me we were going to be—"

"Get this, you big fourdasher!" Kitty's voice was sharp and stinging, cutting like the lash of a whip. "We're not going to be anything. Now beat it before I—!" She seized a vase and raised it menacingly. "I'll teach you to string me along." With one leap Durant cleared the over-turned table, his hands outstretched to grasp the girl.

Ducking aside, Kitty evaded him and ran towards the door. Durant after her. With a quick turn she faced him and hurled the vase directly at his head. He dodged. The china shattered against the wall. She was in the backer's arms, struggling. One scream, and his hand covered her mouth. In an other instant the door swung open and in its yawning width stood Jimmy.

CHAPTER X

The usher stared, mingled amazement and consternation written on his face. He seemed to be trying to understand the situation. The sight of Kitty in Durant's arms held him spellbound, but as the light of understanding dawned, the words of the speech he had been rehearsing came back to him. He flung himself upon Durant, whirling him about.

"You may be my boss, Mr. Durant," he fairly shouted. And then the rehearsed words deserted him, and a natural reaction took the fore. "You dirty rat!" With one blow of his fist he caught the backer squarely upon the chin and the man landed on the floor in a heap.

With an effort Durant slowly pulled himself up, shaking his head groggily.

"Get th'—get out of here before I kill you," Jimmy was standing in front of the backer, his fists clenched, his eyes blazing.

"Jimmy!" Kitty seemed suddenly to become aware of what was going on. Horror, surprise and relief all took possession of her at the same moment. She was relieved because she had been extricated from a hateful position and yet horrified because Jimmy had dared to strike Durant. Not that Durant didn't deserve it, but because he was the one person who could save Jimmy and pull the show out of its present predicament.

"I'll fix you, you fresh punk!" Durant had come to enough to regain the use of his voice, but he didn't care to anger longer. He turned on his heel and staggered through the door, still nursing his battered jaw.

Jimmy, so angry and excited that he scarcely realized what he was doing, started to follow the man. Kitty seized his arm and shook him.

LIVE where you work

Many people employed in Bristol are commuting to and from their work each day. This means an unnecessary expense and a waste of time. They must leave home earlier and return later than if they lived in the town where they are employed. They have less time for pleasure and less time to spend with their families than if they resided here.

Why commute?

Bristol as a place of residence offers every opportunity to be found in a large city. There are paved streets, sanitary sewers, good schools and churches of every denomination; periodic collection of ashes and garbage, police protection and ample space for outdoor recreation.

Housing is adequate

Housing facilities are adequate to meet the needs of all. There are dwellings here which will meet the needs of almost every family. Big six room houses with all modern conveniences including front porches and rear yards. They rent as low as $25 per month, and are comparable in type to those in the larger cities renting for nearly twice the amount.

You're a part of the community

If you live in Bristol you are a part of the community. You are not lost in the crowds of a great city where often times your next door neighbor doesn't know you. Live in Bristol and participate in its affairs and you will find life much more worth the living.

HIBERNIANS WALLOP ST. ANN'S NINE HERE

(By T. M. Juno)

The Hibernians avenged the defeat handed to them by the St. Ann's nine last evening when they swamped the "Saints," 13 to 5.

The game was a free hitting contest. The A. O. H. team, however, proved themselves the aggressors by coming through in the pinches. Every time a Hibernian runner would reach base he would almost be positive to score.

Leyden, of the "Hiboes," celebrated his return to the line-up with three hits, all singles.

McCarthy, besides pitching a steady game, batted a perfect average with two out of two. Connors of the Hibernians and Roe of the "Saints" also turned in 1000%. Roe was robbed out of another hit in the third when Connors raced to deep center for his drive. It was a sacrifice hit as Cooper traveled to third after the catch.

Paletta robbed Mangan of a hit in the fourth by a one-handed catch of his short fly.

There will be no game tonight. Emily meeting the Federals on Thursday.

"KONJOLA MADE ME FEEL LIKE DIFFERENT MAN"

Had Suffered from Complication of Ailments, Tells of Wonderful Relief Modern Medicine Brought

MR. ANDY BOSCO

"I was bothered continually by stomach and kidney troubles," said Mr. Andy Bosco, 1086 Water Street, Meadville, Pa. "My food was the cause of much suffering, for it did not digest as it should but lay like a rock in my stomach. My kidneys were weak, and I had to get up anywhere from four to six times a night. My bowels were irregular and my system was filled with poisons.

"But what a difference just a few bottles of Konjola made. It made me feel like a different man. It removed every single one of my troubles. Now my stomach is in perfect condition. All trace of kidney trouble is gone and I never have to get up at nights. My bowels are regular, and my system has been cleared of all poisons and impurities."

Konjola is sold in Bristol, Pa., at Hoffman's Cut Rate store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

FROM COLOR TO CONTOUR, HATS DISPLAY STRIKING ORIGINALITY

FROM color to contour this season's millinery, especially the new straws, are nothing less than stunning. At first the bondage of sameness has been broken. Not this summer will every hat look like every other hat. In fact, what with huge brims, medium brims, little brims and no brims at all, it becomes quite a bewildering yet most pleasing experience to choose one's headgear.

For every costume type the milliner creates a suitable hat. The trio of models pictured define three distinctly different silhouettes, varying from the snug cap-torque to brims of intriguing novelty and appreciable width.

Plaid straw woven in multi-colors is having a decided vogue in Paris and American women also are showing a keen interest in these novelty effects. Cerise dominates in the shapely little fancy straw toque or cap, as you choose to call it, shown at the top in the illustration.

In the fetching bakou straw centered to the right one foresees a promise of an era of picturesque brims. This model accents the long-at-one-side brim which rolls up gracefully at the opposite side. Its trimming of velvet ribbon is at once effective and in keeping with the latest dictates of the mode.

The very attractive model pictured left suggests the Dutch bonnet brim. These pointed-at-the-side flares occur repeatedly in the new shapes. A modernized drape gives the brim as here shown an added touch of chic. The intricate treatment as here indicated is characteristic of the general trend in millinery designing. Then, too, the fact that the black-and-white theme is adopted in the fashioning of this modish hat is also noteworthy in that black and white combinations are again keenly challenging the supremacy of bright colors.

With so great a variety of new types as is included in recent millinery collections, it follows that the scope of the summer hat wardrobe will necessarily have to be extended. Especially is this so since the mode calls in each instance for the hat to show relation to the costume with which it is worn.

For a fashionable clientele, milliners make it a point to design hats strictly of a sports character, also semi-sports effects, likewise tailored models for smart town wear. To which add varied formal types of millinery which this season especially show an inclination to take on more trimming and display captivating feminine touches beyond those of recent years.

"---as advertised"

HOW many times you see those two words in the course of a day's shopping: "This article for sale — as advertised."

And those two words are as welcome as they are familiar, for they form a bond of confidence between the merchant and yourself. They are his guarantee to you of worth and value.

Here is an article that has been described in your newspaper. Its merits have been told; possibly, too, its price. You know exactly what you will get when you buy it. You know its quality, its utility; you know how it fits into your needs. And when you buy it, you know you are getting not some unproved substitute but the specified article — as represented.

It is easy to understand why that phrase, "as advertised," creates a feeling of confidence. You have learned to depend upon consistently advertised products. You know that the maker has confidence in them, else he would not spend money calling your attention to them day after day, and month after month. You know that they have been approved by the most critical of investigators—the buying public. And above all you know from experience that buying goods "as advertised" is the best investment you can make.

It pays to read the advertisements.
